Dear Mr. Ban Ki-moon,

We, the undersigned, write to you today to advise you of the culmination of the Vienna Declaration, an effort of the scientific community over the last two and a half years to articulate and promote a shared position on the state of global illicit drug policy and the urgent need for reform. The Declaration represents a consensus statement on HIV/AIDS and drug policy that cannot be ignored.

More than 30 experts in public health, medicine, policy and international law authored The Vienna Declaration, the official declaration of the 18th biennial International AIDS Conference in Vienna, Austria. The Declaration concludes that drug policies based on the current criminal justice framework have clearly not achieved their stated objectives to reduce drug supply and demand, and instead have contributed to serious health and social harms.

The Vienna Declaration outlines these harms—such as the mass incarceration of non-violent offenders and epidemic rates of HIV infection among drug users—and their associated social and economic costs. It also provides a set of evidence-based recommendations for drug policy reform to address the urgent nature of these harms.

The Declaration calls on governments and international organisations, including agencies of the United Nations, to fully reorient illicit drug policy using scientific evidence, beginning with the following 5 steps:

1. Undertake a transparent review of the effectiveness of current national and international drug policies.
2. Implement and evaluate a public health approach, based on the best available scientific evidence, to address the individual and community harms stemming from illicit drug use.
3. Decriminalise drug users, scale up clinically proven drug dependence treatment options and abolish ineffective compulsory drug treatment centres that violate the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.
4. Unequivocally endorse and scale up funding for the implementation of the comprehensive package of HIV interventions spelled out in the WHO, UNODC and UNAIDS Target Setting Guide.
5. Meaningfully involve members of the affected community in developing, monitoring and implementing services and policies that affect their lives.

EXR/08/001

On behalf of all the scientists, researchers, academics, and other individuals and organisations who endorsed the Declaration, we kindly request that your organisation provide us with written descriptions of your positions on the 5 steps outlined by the Declaration (listed above) and specific examples of what the United Nations is doing to implement evidence-based and rights-affirming illicit drug policies.

Enclosed are the names of more than 23,400 individuals from the scientific and public health communities who endorsed the Declaration. Among them are leaders in the fields of academia, medicine, politics and law enforcement, including past and present government representatives from Europe, North America and Latin America, along with Nobel laureates in science, economics, medicine, literature and peace. The Declaration has also been endorsed by more than 400 leading scientific public health organisations, such as the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, the American Foundation for AIDS Research, the New York Academy of Medicine, and Human Rights Watch. Academic publications, such as the Lancet and the British Medical Journal, and mainstream media, such as the New York Times and Scientific American, have covered and supported the Declaration's urgent call for reform. Further, recent reports from respected organizations such as the Global Commission on Drug Policy and Global Commission on HIV and the Law echo the Vienna Declaration's call for the decriminalization of drug users and advocated for the scale up of harm reduction services to help win the fight against HIV/AIDS.

We strongly believe this widespread support reflects the broad public and academic agreement regarding the necessity to implement evidence-based reform to mitigate the failures of current drug policies. On behalf of our affiliate organisations and supporters, we look forward to working with you to reorient drug policies towards evidence-based approaches that meaningfully reduce drug harms and also respect, protect and fulfil the human rights of all communities. We await your response on the Declaration's 5 steps, and thank you in advance for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Dr. Evan Wood

THE VIENNA

The Vienna Declaration is a statement seeking to improve community health and safety by calling for the incorporation of scientific evidence into illicit drug policies. We are inviting scientists, health practitioners and the public to endorse this document in order to bring these issues to the attention of governments and international agencies, and to illustrate that drug policy reform is a matter of urgent international significance. We also welcome organizational endorsements.

The criminalisation of illicit drug users is fuelling the HIV epidemic and has resulted in overwhelmingly negative health and social consequences. A full policy reorientation is needed.

In response to the health and social harms of illegal drugs, a large international drug prohibition regime has been developed under the umbrella of the United Nations.¹ Decades of research provide a comprehensive assessment of the impacts of the global "War on Drugs" and, in the wake of the XVIII International AIDS Conference in Vienna, Austria, the international scientific community calls for an acknowledgement of the limits and harms of drug prohibition, and for drug policy reform to remove barriers to effective HIV prevention, treatment and care.

The evidence that law enforcement has failed to prevent the availability of illegal drugs, in communities where there is demand, is now unambiguous.^{2,3} Over the last several decades, national and international drug surveillance systems have demonstrated a general pattern of falling drug prices and increasing drug purity—despite massive investments in drug law enforcement.^{3,4}

Furthermore, there is no evidence that increasing the ferocity of law enforcement meaningfully reduces the prevalence of drug use.⁵ The data also clearly demonstrate that the number of countries in which people inject illegal drugs is growing, with women and children becoming increasingly affected.⁶ Outside of sub-Saharan Africa, injection drug use accounts for approximately one in three new cases of HIV.^{7,8} In some areas where HIV is spreading most rapidly, such as Eastern Europe and Central Asia, HIV prevalence can be as high as 70% among people who inject drugs, and in some areas more than 80% of all HIV cases are among this group.⁸

In the context of overwhelming evidence that drug law enforcement has failed to achieve its stated objectives, it is important that its harmful consequences be acknowledged and addressed. These consequences include but are not limited to:

HIV epidemics fuelled by the criminalisation of people who use illicit drugs and by prohibitions on the provision of sterile needles and opioid substitution treatment.^{9,10}

HIV outbreaks among incarcerated and in institutionalised drug users as a result of punitive laws and policies and a lack of HIV prevention services in these settings.^{11,12}

The undermining of public health systems when law enforcement drives drug users away from prevention and care services and into environments where the risk of infectious disease transmission (e.g. HIV, hepatitis C & B, and tuberculosis) and other harms is increased.^{14,16}

A crisis in criminal justice systems as a result of record incarceration rates in a number of nations.^{17,18} This has negatively affected the social functioning of entire communities. While racial disparities in incarceration rates for drug offences are evident in countries all over the world, the impact has been particularly severe in the US, where approximately one in nine African-American males in the age group 20 to 34 is incarcerated on any given day, primarily as a result of drug law enforcement.¹⁹

Stigma towards people who use illicit drugs, which reinforces the political popularity of criminalising drug users and undermines HIV prevention and other health promotion efforts.^{20,21}

Severe human rights violations, including torture, forced labour, inhuman and degrading treatment, and execution of drug offenders in a number of countries.^{22,23}

DECLARATION

A massive illicit market worth an estimated annual value of US$320 billion.⁴ These profits remain entirely outside the control of government. They fuel crime, violence and corruption in countless urban communities and have destabilised entire countries, such as Colombia, Mexico and Afghanistan.⁴

Billions of tax dollars wasted on a "War on Drugs" approach to drug control that does not achieve its stated objectives and, instead, directly or indirectly contributes to the above harms.²⁴

Unfortunately, evidence of the failure of drug prohibition to achieve its stated goals, as well as the severe negative consequences of these policies, is often denied by those with vested interests in maintaining the status quo.²⁵ This has created confusion among the public and has cost countless lives. Governments and international organisations have ethical and legal obligations to respond to this crisis and must seek to enact alternative evidence-based strategies that can effectively reduce the harms of drugs without creating harms of their own. We, the undersigned, call on governments and international organisations, including the United Nations, to:

Undertake a transparent review of the effectiveness of current drug policies.

Implement and evaluate a science-based public health approach to address the individual and community harms stemming from illicit drug use.

Decriminalise drug users, scale up evidence-based drug dependence treatment options and abolish ineffective compulsory drug treatment centres that violate the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.²⁶

Unequivocally endorse and scale up funding for the implementation of the comprehensive package of HIV interventions spelled out in the WHO, UNODC and UNAIDS Target Setting Guide.²⁷

Meaningfully involve members of the affected community in developing, monitoring and implementing services and policies that affect their lives.

Basing drug policies on scientific evidence will not eliminate drug use or the problems stemming from drug injecting. However, reorienting drug policies towards evidence-based approaches that respect, protect and fulfil human rights has the potential to reduce harms deriving from current policies and would allow for the redirection of the vast financial resources towards where they are needed most: implementing and evaluating evidence-based prevention, regulatory, treatment and harm reduction interventions.

On August 19th, the Vienna declaration was modified to reflect the fact that the XVIII International AIDS Conference has passed. Reference to the UN Secretary General was also removed to enable UN organizations to endorse the Declaration. These modifications were approved without objection by the majority of the writing committee.*
